MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 26.

A MILLIONAIRE DUCHESS .- A new chapter has been added to the singular romance in real life of the great Galiera estate and its heir. The clever duke (twice a duke) who increased it so enormously was a remarkable man in his way. His son, Philip Ferrari, who is so thoroughpaced a radical that he refuses to accept two ducal titles and a property like that of the Vanderbilts or Astors, by inheritance from his father, is a still more remarkable man in his way. And now it comes to light that the widow of the first and mother of the second of these singular personages is horself a remarkable woman in her way. She was a daughter of the splendid Genese house of Brignele-Sale, and inherited in her own right a great fortune. She was presented at the court of Louis Philippe, and that keen-witted old King and his match-making Queen treated her with extraordinary attention, partly because of her illustrious lineage, partly because of he. "beaux yeux" and partly because of her millions. Sho fell desperately in love with their youngest son, the Duke of Montpenwith their youngest son, the Duke of Montpensier, and as King Louis Philippe and Queen Amelie were by no means sure that they would succeed in humbugging England and marrying Montpensier to the child-sister of Isabella of Spain, they encouraged Mlle. Brignole-Sale as a second string to his princely bow. But Guizot achieved his purpose. The Duke married his Spanish princess; and the Genoese heires disgusted with life, gave her hand and fortune to her countryman, Ferrari, Duke of Galiera. Now that her husband has died, and that her son obstinatly refuses to accept his inheritance. son obstinatly refuses to accept his inheritance the widowed Duchess find herself overburdened with wealth. She has accordingly, in a fit of retrospective sentiment as rare as are her means are counterfeits.

PRICE $50 PER TON. of indulging, deliberately bestowed an estate near Bologna, in Italy, worth $2,000,000, or 10,-000,000 of francs, on her first love, the Duke of Montpensier, who jilted her for a princess thirty years ago, and is now the stout princess at Soville! - Exchange. BOOTS AND SHOES.
